

Hamadi Redissi is the founding president of the Tunisian Observatory of Democratic Transition. He is a member of the editorial board of Jura Gentium, the European Journal of Philosophy and Public Debate, the Mélanges of the Dominican Institute of Oriental Studies, Dirassat Siyassiya and the Tunisian Journal of Political Science. He is the academic coordinator of the Political School of the Friedrich Ebert Stiftung in Tunisia (2017-2019). Professor of Political Science at the University of Tunis, Al-Manar, he has also been a visiting scholar at the University of Bologna (he taught an annual course from 2000 to 2010), at Saint Joseph (from 2000 to 2013), at Fordham University (1998-1999) and at Yale University (2007-2008). He was a resident scholar at the Institute of Advanced Studies in Nantes (2015-2016) and at the Center for Advanced Studies Recht als Kultur (Bonn, 2010).

He holds a Doctorat d'Etat in Political Science (1992) from the University of Tunis.

He is the author of several publications on contemporary Islam and on the political transition in Tunisia.

Contact: redissihamadi@gmail.com

Areas of expertise :

- Contemporary Islam
- The political transition in Tunisia

Languages: Arabic / French / English / Italian.